

Alex Pollack
President
Honeywell Indonesia

Alex Pollack is responsible for advancing Honeywell’s corporate mission and goals in Indonesia with multiple constituencies, including government and public agencies. Working closely with all businesses, he is responsible for leading the development of a framework for driving “One Honeywell” growth initiatives, including expanding into new markets, new product offerings, and developing organic and inorganic growth strategies.

Pollack has extensive experience in strategic business development and management in the power, oil and gas infrastructure, and manufacturing sectors. Prior to joining Honeywell, he was head of technical and industry support at Bakrie & Brothers. During his six-year tenure with Bakrie, Pollack served for four years as inter-unit technology liaison, advanced multi-company business opportunities, and developed business plans for collaboration and capitalization. He also served as director of operations for two years and was responsible for the P&L of 13 companies at the holding company level.

Earlier in his career, Pollack worked in various management and engineering service roles for a number of companies including McDermott, South East Asia Pipe Industries, Europipe, and Gilbert Commonwealth.

Pollack earned his master’s degree in management from Florida State University, and graduated magna cum laude from Le Tourneau University, Texas, with a bachelor’s degree in welding engineering.
